Report by the Head of Department of Social and Political Sciences

The Faculty was successful in achieving 23 out of 24 in the Quality Assurance Agency Teaching Review undertaken in October 2001. The positive outcome was the result of the collective effort of academic, administrative staff and students. The result was particularly gratifying, given the problems faced by staff as a result of the complaint from students which was investigated over the Long Vacation of 2001. The Faculty had recovered remarkably well from the trials of the Lent and Easter term in order to put in a sustained effort in the QAA exercise. The Faculty was very grateful for the support of members of the University who helped to prepare the Faculty for the assessment especially Duncan McCallum, Education Section.

The Faculty was also gratified by the success achieved in the Research Assessment Exercise where the Faculty received a four for the Politics' submission with the Centre for International Studies and Sociology and Social Psychology were pleased to receive a five. Although there is much controversy surrounding both forms of assessment in teaching and research, the Faculty emerged from the QAA and RAE with considerable success.

The results of the RAE had a profound effect on the following second and third term of the academic year. The Politics Group considered that their result reflected the difficult conditions of formulating a research policy with good results when the two groups did not work more closely together. Professor Hawthorn spearheaded a proposal for dividing the Faculty of Social and Political Sciences into two Faculties, with Politics and the CIS as a new Faculty. Discussions were held with the whole of the Department, all the University Teaching Officers, and various concerned groups, such as Assistants and Support Staff, and Directors of Studies. In the end any formal alliance with the CIS proved unviable. However, the wish to departmentalise was confirmed and will be carried through to the next academic year. While all these discussions have taken a good deal of time, teaching and examining continued as usual.

Tony Manstead, who had joined the Department in January as Professor in Social Psychology, took an active and creative role in all aspects of this work at Faculty level and in formulating a new teaching and research strategy for the Social Psychology Group.

David Runciman won a prestigious Pilkington Prize for excellence in teaching. Dan Scroop left the Faculty at the end of his temporary lectureship appointment. Dr Max Bergman and Dr Véronique Mottier, both of whom had proved much more than 'replacement' teaching and research members of the Faculty, left to take up outstanding posts in Switzerland. The Gladstone Prize for 2002 was awarded to Malcolm Coffin (Selwyn), for a dissertation entitled: "Latino partisanship, policy preferences and their consequences for electoral politics in America.

Following the promotion of Marie Butcher to Administrative Officer at Land Economy, the Department was fortunate in appointing Silvana Dean as Administrative Secretary. The Faculty secured an additional post of Senior Technician to Glynis Pilbeam, Computer Officer, and appointed Shane Harvey. The Library made a number of appointments, Ivana Chilvers, Glenda Cawcutt and Sonia Londero as Library Assistants to fill vacancies created by Richard Parker, Jennifer Webb and Wendy Sawford and Jenni Skinner as an additional junior Library Assistant. Glenda Cawcutt took maternity leave.

The end of the year saw the retirement of John Childerley, the Faculty's Technician. He will be much missed and we sadly also said goodbye to Helen Gibson who had returned to work part-time as secretary for the Part I and Part II examinations.

The Social and Political Sciences Faculty Library

The year has seen a number of changes in the Library, all representing significant improvements in service.

A Collection Development Policy was produced., this is a planning document that identifies and communicates the long and short term collection goals and policies of the Library. Its aim is to provide a general framework for the development of all collections, and is devised and maintained in consultation with academic staff taking into account the mission and goals of the Faculty.

In response to many requests received from students the Library was pleased to extend its opening hours during evenings and Saturdays in Full Term. This was made possible by the establishment of a CS2 Junior Library Assistant post approved by the University Resource Management Committee.

The Library welcomed four new members of staff, Ivana Chilvers joined the team as Senior Library Assistant in January, and has greatly improved the efficiency of the issue desk. Sonia Londero joined the team in November and has enthusiastically revamped and enhanced the library web pages. Glenda Cawcutt has special responsibility for the journal collection, both hardcopy and electronic. Ms Jennifer Skinner began work as our Junior Library Assistant in May. The Librarian is grateful to them all, as well as to the Library's casual student helpers, for another year's work successfully achieved.

The Library accessioned 1,472 new items during the year, compared with 1,267 in 2000/01. This excludes periodical parts, of which 335 were added to stock. The total number of loans nearly doubled this year to 61,096. This in part reflected an increase in issue of books held on Reserve. The yearly stock check identified 120 missing books.

At the beginning of the academic year the Library conducted induction tours to familiarise students with the Library's collections and services. Tours on average last 30 minutes and are designed to provide orientation rather than to instil copious amounts of information.

At the beginning of the academic year periodical subscriptions required 33% of the Library budget, but as prices spiral it becomes more difficult to maintain that balance and there is little room for new periodical literature without cutting into funds allocated for books. As a result, the Library undertook a review of periodical subscriptions to assess whether they support the tripos and mission of the Faculty. A survey was sent to academic staff during summer 2001 asking each member to vote for periodicals essential for teaching and research. Using the results of this survey and information on the availability of electronic versions, 18 periodical titles were cancelled and 5 new subscriptions were taken out.

Newton, the new University online Library system, was introduced during the summer and a significant amount of time was spent by staff in tidying up bibliographic data and on attending training courses.

Several challenges await the library in the coming year. These are:

- i) to work in collaboration with the University Library to ensure the full potential of Newton is achieved,
- ii) to continue developing the collection to support teaching and learning within the Faculty within the financial constraints imposed by a static budget and increased student numbers,
- iii) continuing to shift the emphasis from collection to access and integrating electronic sources with paper sources.

Ms Julie Nicholas
Faculty Librarian
