Report by the Head of Department of Social and Political Sciences

The academic year 1999-2000 has seen a number of major changes in staffing, academic direction and curriculum. Professor Bryan Turner took over as Head of the Department whilst Professor Martin Richards concentrated on re-establishing his research work and role as Director of the Centre for Family Research following his three year period as Head of Department. There have been a number of significant departures. Dale Hay (who was promoted to Reader in October 1999) and Kenneth Prandy left the Faculty to take up Professorships at the University of Cardiff. David Lane took retirement, but continues with his research and postgraduate supervisions in the Faculty. Margaret Ely left the Centre for Family Research to take up a Lectureship at Anglia Polytechnic University.

Stephanie Macek, former Librarian took early retirement in July and two Library Assistants took positions elsewhere: Henry Pipe, an administrative position at Birkbeck College and Barbara Parr continued with her Library career by moving to a Cambridgeshire County Council Library. Beth Howe resigned as General Board Administrative Officer. The Faculty wishes these former colleagues well in their new positions, and thanks them for their contribution.

The University granted the Faculty a Professorship in Psychology and recruitment for this position has been underway during this academic year. Indeed, recruitment has been a major concern during this year and the Faculty will announce four new appointees to University Lectureships and University Assistant Lectureships and to the Chair in Psychology in the next annual report 2000/2001. New starters during the academic year include Paul Martin who joined us from the University of Oxford to teach American Politics and two Research Assistants, Zoe Morris and Alisi Mekatoa.

David Halpern and Georgina Born were appointed to University Lectureships and David Lehmann was promoted to Reader.

The administrative positions in the Faculty have changed considerably during the last academic year. Kate Stacey was appointed as Administrative Officer, Marie Butcher as Administrative Secretary and Deborah Clark as Accounts Clerk. Glynis Pilbeam was promoted from Chief Computing Assistant to Computer Officer from 1 January 2000.

The Faculty would like to thank Helen Thompson for her strenuous contribution to the reorganisation of the Tripos and to the administration of the Faculty in her role as Academic Secretary. Helen Statham has taken over the role of Deputy Director of the Centre for Family Research.

The Faculty continues to flourish academically. Professor Richards was awarded a Doctorate of Science. The Faculty hosted the first Sage Interdisciplinary Lecture during November 1999, given by Professor Richard Sennett on "The Sociology of Work". The second Sage Lecture will be given by Professor Judith Dunn on psychology in Autumn 2000.

Professor Turner became the editor of a new journal (the 'Journal of Classical Sociology') which has on its editorial board several members of the Faculty. Professor John Dunn published 'The Cunning of Unreason. Making Sense of Politics'. The Centre for Family Research, which now has independent status and a formal Committee of Management, continues to prosper as a research centre, and also ran a seminar series on 'The Body and Law'. The Sociological Research Group continues to play an important part in graduate training and development. Patrick Baert ran a successful conference on Social Theory on new directions in critical theory (with participants from Europe and North and South America).

A number of members of staff took sabbatical leave during the year and used their time fruitfully. Christel Lane gave several papers on globalisation, one at the Harvard Center for European Studies. David Lane completed his interview research with ninety Russian oil executive and leading politicians. David Lehmann continued his work on fundamentalism, delivering papers at conferences in Rio and Paris and undertaking fieldwork in Israel. Professor Dunn worked on democracy, politics and development, completing his book and publishing several articles in the THES. Geoffrey Ingham worked on his study of the history and theory of money, resulting in several large articles such as 'Babylonian Madness' which is to be published in John Smithin's 'What is Money?' Juliet Mitchell completed her book on hysteria, and gave a number of public lectures including a talk on trauma, recognition and language to the Société Psychanalytique de Paris. John Thompson completed his major study of political scandal which was recently published by Polity Press. Professor Geoffrey Hawthorn completed several papers which are to appear in 'Review of International Studies, The Interregnum: controversies in world politics', and 'The Cambridge History of Twentieth-Century Philosophy'. Helen Thompson completed papers on the impact of the open international economy on British politics and considerations of raison d'état in modern democracies. Bob Blackburn completed an extensive report for the United Nations on gender inequality and segregation based on data from 175 countries. This report will be key source material for a UN publication on 'The World's Women'. David Halpern completed a successful ESRC grant application for his work on social capital and also submitted several articles to journals on social trust and ethnic density, and gave a number of public lectures. These periods of leave have obviously contributed significantly to our research profile and publications record.

The Faculty commemorated the second anniversary of the death of Brenda Young, former Administrative Officer, by hanging a painting of the river near Granchester in the Faculty office.

The Faculty now faces a challenging period with the forthcoming Research Assessment Exercise and the Subject Review during 2001 and with the continued implementation of the new Tripos as Part II is introduced in 2000-1. The reorganisation of the Tripos has been a successful if demanding response to the Review of the Faculty which was published in 1998. The changes to the structure of the Tripos allow for a multi-disciplinary first year, more disciplinary streams in the second year and the possibility of either a more specialised disciplinary course, or an inter-disciplinary one in the third year in which the majority of papers are closely related to the research interests of the staff.

We are confident that, whilst daunting, these assessments will produce a greater sense of common purpose and collective responsibility for teaching and research.
