Paper choice regulations for Part IIB SOCIOLOGY stream

- (i) one paper chosen from SOC6–13;
- (ii) two further papers chosen from SOC6–15, one of which may be substituted by a dissertation on a subject approved by the Head of the Department of Sociology,
- (iii) one paper chosen from ARC8-33, BAN2–9, POL13, POL17, SAN7-13, Papers PBS 6–9 of the Psychological and Behavioural Sciences Tripos or a further paper chosen from SOC6–15.

(Note: Paper ARC9 can only be taken if a candidate has taken Paper ARC8 at Part IIA ;
ARC10 & BAN3 are one and the same paper;
ARC11 & BAN 9 are one and the same paper;
Papers POL13, POL17 can only be taken if POL3 or POL4 was taken at Part IIA.

Paper choice regulations for Part IIB SOC/SOC ANTH joint stream

- (i) two papers chosen from SOC5–15;
- (ii) one paper chosen from SAN5 and SAN6, and one paper chosen from SAN5–SAN13:
- (iii) a candidate may substitute for one paper a dissertation on a subject approved by the Head of the Department of Sociology,

(Note: Candidates can only choose any individual paper from the range of papers that they did not take in Part IIA)

Paper choice regulations for Part IIB POL/SOC joint stream

- (i) two papers chosen from POL6, POL10–20;
- (ii) two papers chosen from SOC5–15;
- (iii) a candidate may substitute for one paper a dissertation on a subject approved by the Head of the Department of Politics and International Studies.
- (iv) A candidate who chooses POL20 may not offer a dissertation.

(Note: Paper POL10 cannot be taken if POL8 was taken in Part IIA; Paper SOC5 cannot be taken if a candidate is also taking POL6)

Important: Students will have chosen a stream in their second year. They are not permitted to switch tracks between Part IIA and Part IIB unless they switch from a Joint to a Single track (for example Soc/Soc Anth part IIA to Sociology part IIB)

Sociology Paper Descriptions

(Note: All these papers will be assessed by a 3 hour-examination only)

Soc 5: Statistics and Methods

Offered to: students in HSPS single tracks, and HSPS Joint Soc/SocAnth and Pol/Soc tracks; and to students in the Education Tripos.

In this course students will learn about a range of quantitative and qualitative methods and how they may be applied to explore issues in social science. Students will have the opportunity to apply new skills and knowledge in lab sessions, exploring real-life data. A wide range of statistical methods for data analysis will be covered, from simple descriptive statistics through to multivariate regression, logistic models and factor analysis. The course will also cover survey design, sampling methods, techniques in interviewing, and the principles of ethnography. At the end of the course students will:

1. Be aware of the different approaches to carrying out empirical research and the epistemological backgrounds that inform the approaches
2. Be able to read and understand empirical research published in books and journal articles
3. Know how to perform basic statistical analysis using SPSS software, and to interpret findings correctly
4. Have a solid foundation in basic methods and statistics, which will enable progression to more advanced courses, if desired

The focus of this course will be on research methods as practical tools to address real-life questions relevant to sociologists and social science. No prior expertise in mathematics or statistics is necessary. The skills and knowledge gained from studying on this course will be of benefit to students embarking on a substantial research project such as a dissertation, and will be useful for those interested in a career involving use, and interpretation, of data.

Soc6: A subject in sociology I

Offered to: students in HSPS single tracks, and HSPS Joint Soc/SocAnth and Pol/Soc tracks

A prescribed paper in sociology. In 2017-18, it will be Advanced Social Theory. This course offers students the opportunity to pursue their interests in contemporary social theory at an advanced level. The aim of the course is to encourage students to use social theory in order to think creatively, constructively and critically about the ways in which the social and political world is changing today. The course takes for granted an intermediate level of knowledge of classical and contemporary social theory; students are expected to develop and extend their knowledge of key thinkers by reading their work in greater depth during this course. However, the course itself is organized around problems and issues, not around thinkers and texts. The emphasis is on encouraging students to practise social theory by thinking theoretically about particular problems and issues. The course seeks to bring social theory alive by getting students to draw on the resources of social theory in order to understand the world of the 21st century and how it is changing.

Soc7: A subject in sociology II

Offered to: students in HSPS single tracks, and HSPS Joint Soc/SocAnth and Pol/Soc tracks; and to students in the PBS Tripos.

A prescribed paper in sociology. In 2017-18, it will be Media, Culture and Society. This paper focuses on the sociological study of media and of cultural and symbolic forms, ranging from youth subcultures to media power and communications media, including television, the press and the internet. The precise topics and scope of the paper vary each year, but may include the political economy of media and culture; the study of media and cultural institutions; online privacy and surveillance; journalism and news; audience studies and the role of ethnography, identity and representation in relation to culture and media; theories of the public sphere and of cultural citizenship; the changing nature of political communications; theory and analysis of digital media and the internet and their implications for social and political life. The work of theorists such as Adorno, Benjamin, Habermas, Bourdieu, Barthes, Baudrillard, McLuhan, Williams, Becker, Hebdige, Goffman and Castells is discussed in relation to the substantive themes.

Soc8: A subject in sociology III

Offered to: students in HSPS single tracks, and HSPS Joint Soc/SocAnth and Pol/Soc tracks

In 2017-18, it will be Revolution, War and Militarism.

Revolutions are often accompanied by war, and cast a long shadow over a country's civil-military relations. This paper adopts a holistic approach to these three interrelated phenomena: revolution, war, and militarism. After surveying the relevant literature, three historical cases are examined: (1) America, from the War of Independence and Civil War through the two world wars and the Cold War, to the current War on Terror; (2) France, from the Great Revolution and Napoleonic wars through the rebellious century to the present day; and (3) Iran, covering the Pahlavi dynasty, the Iranian Revolution, and the Islamic Republic that followed. The objective of these extended histories is to uncover the causes and outcomes of revolution, and the role of war in regime change.

Soc9: A subject in sociology IV

Offered to: students in HSPS single tracks, and HSPS Joint Soc/SocAnth and Pol/Soc tracks; and to students in the Economics Tripos.

A prescribed paper in sociology. In 2017-18, it will be Modern Capitalism. These lectures seek to develop an understanding both of capitalism in general - its fundamental structure and functioning - and of its national varieties. Last, the global extension of capitalism receives consideration. The course of lectures covers three main areas. The first examines general theories of the structure of capitalism in both the classical and modern literature; its historical development and fundamental institutions, such as the firm, the market etc. Second, some of the major capitalist economies are examined in detail, particularly the USA and Japan. Third, two important related issues in the development and change of capitalist economies are examined: the question of globalization and 'varieties of capitalism'; and the transition to capitalism in post-communist societies.

Soc10: A subject in sociology V

Offered to: students in HSPS single tracks, and HSPS Joint Soc/SocAnth and Pol/Soc tracks

In 2017-18, it will be Gender. This 20-week Part Two paper introduces key theorists, concepts and topics in the sociology of gender and contemporary feminist theory.

Lectures outline the feminist analysis of sex, gender, the sexual division of labour, and the gendered economies of production and reproduction accounting for unequal pay, the feminisation of housework and the family wage. The paper includes lectures on masculinities, new reproductive technologies, affect and embodiment, international feminism, and trans/queer theory. The paper is offered in a lecture/seminar format and a key text (or texts) are required reading which students are expected to prepare in advance.

Soc11: A subject in sociology VI

Offered to: students in HSPS single tracks, and HSPS Joint Soc/SocAnth and Pol/Soc tracks; and to students in the PBS Tripos.

In 2017-18, it will be Racism, Race and Ethnicity.

This course explores the emergence of modern notions of race and ethnicity, contemporary forms of racism, processes of racialisation, and the social and political forces that have shaped them. Key questions will include: How are racial ideas conceptualized and justified through a variety of biological, social and cultural discourses? How did race and ethnicity come to be defined and embedded in the context of colonial and post-colonial rule? What are the, often complex, relations between ideas of race, the production of difference and identity, and the pervasiveness of social exclusion? Why does race remain such a powerful determinant of individual and collective identities? What is the specificity of ethnicity in contemporary society? Why and how does race and ethnicity matter?

Soc12: A subject in sociology VII

Offered to: students in HSPS single tracks, and HSPS Joint Soc/SocAnth and Pol/Soc tracks; and to students in the Economics Tripos.

A prescribed paper in sociology. In 2017-18, it will be Modern Britain. The paper focuses on significant changes in British society since 1945 with specific reference to the relations and interplay between aspects of gender, ethnicity, national identity and class. It provides knowledge and understanding of the political, economic, and social forces underpinning the trajectory of modern British society. The paper develops critical and intellectual skills and an appreciation of the contribution of political ideology and social theory to the analysis and interpretation of social change. The core lectures deal with the following topics: politics and society since 1945; nationalism and devolution; class and work; gender and family; and race and ethnicity.

Modes of Teaching and Supervision Arrangements:

The course is taught by means of lectures and supervisions. Students will be expected to produce a minimum of 4 essays. They will be supported with 6 supervisions. Each supervision session will typically be used to read and discuss an article, and students may be asked to present on a topic, or find other ways to address the topic in ways that are stimulating and provide a learning experience for students. Students are expected to prepare for a supervision in advance and to actively engage in discussion.

Mode of Assessment: One three hour examination paper from which three questions must be answered.

Soc13: A subject in sociology VIII

Offered to: students in HSPS single tracks, and HSPS Joint Soc/SocAnth and Pol/Soc tracks; and to Students in the BBS Tripos

A prescribed paper in sociology. In 2017-18, it will be a paper on Health, Medicine and Society. This paper provides students with a critical survey of principal themes and debates in contemporary medical sociology. It explores the major social causes of health and illness in modern societies with special reference to such factors as social class, gender, ethnicity, and age; provides students with a sociological grasp of the issues and problems associated with chronic illness; investigates a variety of key topics in the sociology of mental health; and, finally, develops a sociological analysis of the major organizational, professional, and technological components of medical institutions and medical practice in contemporary society. The paper also explores new methods of health care delivery with an eye to understanding their roles in either fostering or minimising social inequalities pertaining to health and illness. In addition to these substantive topics, the paper also examines cutting edge theoretical approaches to the study of health and illness in society, including: social constructionism, feminist theory, the sociology of the body, the sociology of science, and phenomenology. In short, the paper explores a wide range of both substantive and theoretical issues pertaining to the nature and distribution of health and illness in modern societies.

Soc14: Education (Paper 3 in Part II of the Education Tripos)

In 2017-18, it will be The Sociology of Education. This paper provides students with an introduction to key themes in the sociology of education through a focus on two topics: Education, democracy and global social justice, and Education and social justice in Britain. The first section examines the changing role of education in relation to democracy and nation-building, changing forms of global governance, and the global politics of knowledge and social change. The second section brings issues within these global debates to bear on a more in-depth study of the relationships between education and social justice in Britain. This section puts particular emphasis on the interplay between social and educational research, the application of social policy, and the role of the school in the implementation of policy. The lectures will examine the intersectional politics of difference, and the spatial and family dimensions of educational inequalities. Students taking this paper will gain an informed sociological understanding of national and international developments in key areas of educational politics, policy and public debate.

Soc15: Criminology, Sentencing and the Penal System (Paper 23 of the Law Tripos)

The Paper aims to give students an informed and critical understanding of key issues in Law, Criminal Justice and Penal Policy in England and Wales (with reference to other countries where relevant). It does so in five ways. Firstly, by helping student to read the evidence for patterns of crime and for pathways into and out of offending in the context of i) fads, fashions and political ideas in criminal justice, ii) our knowledge of individual, family and situational risk factors, and iii) offender rehabilitation and desistance from crime. Secondly, by looking at the principles of punishment and at empirical evidence for the effectiveness of different crime reduction strategies. Thirdly, by considering the legal framework of sentencing and the theoretical and practical dilemmas facing judges and magistrates. Fourthly by examining some of the challenges faced by the criminal justice and penal system in dealing with specific groups of offenders such as adolescents, women, and those who are regarded as 'dangerous'. Finally, there is consideration of community penalties, prisons and parole, and broader questions of gender, equality and fairness in contemporary criminal justice.

Sociology Dissertation

Students may offer a dissertation of between 6,000 and 10,000 words in place of a paper; they choose a topic and approach a supervisor of their choice. For many students the opportunity to study a topic of their choosing in depth is the most rewarding part of the Tripos. Students are advised to start considering a topic and supervisor for their dissertation before the end of their second year; Directors of Studies can help with these decisions. Many students do fieldwork for their dissertations over the summer vacation before the start of the third year. Titles should be submitted as soon as possible, but not later than the second week of Michaelmas term, and must be approved by the Head of the Sociology department. Before undertaking fieldwork students will need to submit a research ethics and risk assessment form, available from the website. In addition to individual supervision, workshops will be provided to assist students with the collection and analysis of data. The dissertation is submitted in the first week of Easter term.

Sample dissertations from previous years can be consulted in hard-copy in the Sociology Office, Free School Lane; or on the Part II Sociology Moodle site.

For students who wish to do a sociology dissertation in 2017-18, Dr Matthew Sparkes will organise, a Dissertation Planning Workshop, on Wednesday 17 May, 11.00-1.00pm; Sociology Seminar Room.
